

From the Desk of the Editors:

The third issue of this quarterly journal has now been published. The journal, even within this short period of time, is gaining attention within the academicians and researchers of different disciplines of natural sciences. Contributions from different areas are being submitted to this journal at regular intervals. But in this issue we selected to publish only five articles due to different technical reasons. Though the online submission system of journal still occasionally develops certain technical glitches, the main obstacles behind not being able to select some interesting articles for this issue are the absence of proper reference lists in the submission, too technical presentations of the articles for the mixed audience of a journal of interdisciplinary nature like the current one, etc. But we hope to publish those articles too in the coming issues after necessary revisions from the corresponding authors.

After these three issues, it may be apparent that the primary purpose for the publication of this journal has already been met. This journal is really developing into an effective vehicle of academic exchanges among the college teachers of natural sciences along with the scientists working in different institutes, at least within our state; the list of authors in these issues itself may substantiate that claim. Moreover the interdisciplinary character of this journal is also obvious from each of these issues. But the bilingual character of this journal has somewhat been compromised due the fact that only one article so far has been contributed in Bengali. We hope that this bias will be overcome in future with more number of submissions in Bengali, which we are earnestly looking for.
