

From the Editors' Desk

The current issue was scheduled to be published more than a fortnight ago. In spite of utmost effort from our part, we were unable to avoid this enormous delay for the first time, due to certain practical difficulties and we express our earnest regret for that. We previously mentioned that being published from a college, this journal does not have any dedicated editorial team; the teachers of this college do this job side by side their teaching and other academic/administrative assignments. This time assignments of University examinations for the editorial members and certain other technical glitches contributed this delay.

In this issue, six articles are being published; among them half of the articles are research reports and the other half consists of brief review type articles. The articles, in this issue, cover the area of Chemical Sciences and Biological Sciences focussing on varied aspects in these fields of research. In the coming issues, participation of the students in the form of project reports will be highly solicited along with the contributions from the teachers and researchers.

This is the festival number; we are going to unveil this issue wishing all of you for a very happy festival season to come.
